Harvey Milk was an extraordinary man who dreamed that everyone - even gay people - would have equality. He wanted to be treated like everyone else, and he wanted to be able to live and love how he pleased. Harvey thought that he needed a symbol to give people hope, so he worked with Gilbert Baker to design a rainbow flag. Harvey was proud of the flag, and proud of himself. He hoped that this flag would make others feel pride, too. Harvey's dream became a flag for us all.
